The Need to Limit Plastic Use in Daily Life.

Plastic products have become an essential part of modern life due to their low cost and convenience. However, increasing concerns about environmental damage have led to a growing debate on whether their use should be limited. While some people support continued use for practical reasons, others argue that restrictions are necessary to reduce pollution. In my view, plastic use should be limited gradually to balance convenience and environmental protection.

Plastic should be limited because it causes serious environmental pollution. ^{→ WHY???} Large amounts of plastic waste are dumped into oceans every year, where it harms marine life and damages ecosystems. This pollution is especially serious because animals cannot distinguish plastic from food, and once it enters the food chain, the impact spreads widely. For example, a sea turtle may mistake a floating plastic bag for a jellyfish and swallow it, which can block its digestive system and eventually lead to death. Such incidents show that plastic waste does ^{only} not just pollute the ocean but ^{also} directly threatens the survival of marine species. Therefore, plastic pollution is a major environmental problem that should not be ignored.

Plastic ^{use} should also be limited because it poses risks to human health. As plastic breaks down into tiny particles known as microplastics, these can enter our daily lives through food, water and even the air we breathe. This is worrying because these particles are too small to be noticed but can accumulate in the human body over time. For instance, studies have found microplastics in seafood such as fish and shellfish, which are then consumed by humans. This means people may unknowingly ingest plastic regularly, potentially leading to long-term health issues. Therefore, plastic pollution is not only an environmental concern but also a growing threat to human well-being. In conclusion, plastic pollution not only damages ecosystems but also poses risks to human health. Therefore, plastic use should be reduced gradually through practical measures, so that society can move towards a more sustainable future without losing the convenience that plastic provides.

Introduction

Plastic products are widely used in daily life because they are cheap, light and convenient. However, there is an ongoing debate about whether their use should be limited. (←background) Some people believe plastic is necessary for modern life, while others think it causes serious problems. (←Different people's opinion) In my view, plastic use should be controlled carefully so that a balance can be achieved between convenience and environmental protection. (←Your opinion)

Body Paragraph 1

On the one hand, plastic plays an important role in our daily lives because of its convenience. (←Point - the advantage of plastic) It is widely used in packaging, transportation and even in hospitals, where safety and hygiene are important. Without plastic, many everyday activities would become more difficult and expensive. (←Analysis) For example, when people buy food from a supermarket, items such as meat, vegetables and drinks are often wrapped in plastic to keep them fresh and clean. A shopper carrying groceries in lightweight plastic bags can easily take them home, while heavier materials like glass or metal would be less practical. (←Example) This shows that plastic makes daily life easier and more efficient. (←Point/Link)

Body Paragraph 2

On the other hand, the problems caused by plastic cannot be ignored. (←Point - the disadvantage of plastic) Plastic waste leads to serious environmental pollution and harms wildlife. Large amounts of plastic are thrown away after a single use and end up in rivers and oceans. (←Analysis) For example, a sea turtle may mistake a floating plastic bag for a jellyfish and swallow it. The plastic can block its digestive system, making it unable to eat properly and eventually leading to death. In addition, plastic breaks down into tiny particles called microplastics, which can enter the human body through food and water. (←Example) These problems show that plastic use, if not controlled, can have long-term negative effects on both nature and human health. (←Point/Link)

Conclusion

In conclusion, plastic is both useful and harmful, so it should not be completely banned or freely used without control. (←Summary) Instead, practical steps, such as reducing single-use plastics and improving recycling, should be taken to limit its negative impact while still keeping its benefits. (←Solution) In this way, society can move towards a more sustainable future without losing the convenience that plastic provides.

Life on the Slopes

Over the past year, many young people, like Tony, have been travelling the world, taking on seasonal jobs in exciting locations. One such destination is Wanaka, New Zealand, home to a fashionable ski resort that attracts visitors from around the globe. Working there as a ski-lift ^{attendant} ~~attendant~~ offers a unique glimpse into life behind the scenes of a popular winter playground.

Wanaka draws tourists for several reasons. The resort ^{is} ~~is~~ known for its reliable snow conditions, with artificial snow produced every night to ensure the slopes remain open even when natural snow ~~fall~~ ^{is} limited. Snow depth can reach between two and four meters, providing excellent skiing conditions. In addition, the mountain scenery is ~~stunning~~ ^{stunning}, with snow and ice forming dramatic shapes that create a breathtaking environment. Together, these features offer visitors an exciting and ~~memorable~~ ^{memorable}.

winter sports experience.

Being a ~~lift~~ ^{liftie} involves more than just standing by a machine.

Workers are responsible for operating ski lifts, helping visitors ~~safely~~ ^{safely} get on and off ~~and~~ ^{safely} and clearing ice and snow from frozen chairs each morning.

The ~~job~~ job often requires long hours outdoors in freezing temperatures.

However, it can still appeal to young ~~people~~ people. There is:

sometimes the chance to ski during quiet periods, and the relaxed atmosphere, combined with the ~~beautu~~ beauty of the mountain setting, makes the experience enjoyable despite the hard work.

The job is not without challenges. Workers must deal with harsh weather, strong winds, and poor visibility, which can make conditions both uncomfortable and dangerous. The work is physically demanding, and training may be limited, meaning new employees must learn quickly. For anyone considering this role, it is important to come prepared. Bringing proper warm clothing, understanding basic safety procedures, and being ready for tough conditions can make a big difference. With the right mindset, working as a liftie can be both challenging and rewarding.

New Writing Task (Text C) - In-class Practising

Text C: The new job

This text is about a young person called Jeswin who has just started to work for an airline company called Golden Tours, as part of their airport 'Meet and Greet' team. Jeswin is being looked after on his first day by a senior member of the team, Edgar.

Edgar laid his large hand on Jeswin's small shoulder and strode onto the wide Departures concourse, as Jeswin tripped and danced to keep up with him.

'You're going to be very busy today,' Edgar announced, an ironic grimace contorting his round face. Edgar stopped suddenly and twisted Jeswin's shoulder through a dizzying one hundred and eighty degrees so that Jeswin could see the workplace. The concourse at present was eerily silent. It comprised many empty roped-off labyrinths that passengers would negotiate before they reached the check-in desk, where their luggage would be surrendered into the safe hands of Golden Tours staff and deposited in the cargo area of the plane.

Jeswin wriggled to detach himself from Edgar's large hand. He had been attached (in a more figurative sense) today to Edgar to learn his job: making sure that the passengers had the documents they needed to fly, showing them where to take their luggage and giving helpful and friendly advice.

10

Edgar's expression began to radiate mild exasperation and Jeswin turned to see its focus: a small knot of passengers wandering uncertainly towards the Golden Tours check-in area. Their luggage trolley was performing a shaky dance, not dissimilar to the movements of Jeswin's own feet a few minutes earlier. A small child hung onto its side trying to deter three disobedient suitcases from unscheduled disembarkation.

Jeswin immediately understood that this family might need support.

'I've got a report to write for the boss tonight!' huffed Edgar. 'Apparently she doesn't know what our job involves. Hah!'

20

He marched towards the group. 'Good morning. Your documents, please, so I can make sure they are in order before you drop your luggage off.' Edgar flipped through identity documents with the dexterity of a master player shuffling a deck of cards, before surveying the three suitcases. 'Take it you packed those suitcases yourselves and they haven't been out of sight since you got here? Go to the roped area over there. Shouldn't be too long to wait.'

25

Now a few more groups were drawing closer. Jeswin approached the nearest group and followed the routine. This continued throughout the morning, meeting and greeting passengers bound for numerous destinations. Edgar had also told him to watch out for unattended luggage and report such items to him. This worried Jeswin: it felt like too much to focus on at once, especially as there seemed to be a lot of luggage around. Generally, though, Jeswin was pleased with himself. He was not as fast as Edgar, of course, but he remembered the 'meet and greet' procedure, and he felt his courteous manner and diligence paid off, as he often received smiles and thanks in return.

30

Edgar on the other hand was becoming more irritable. 'Fifteen minutes for lunch, as usual,' he grumbled. 'I've hardly seen you this morning, young man. Has everything been all right?'

Suddenly a shout came up from one of the queues. 'Hey! That man tried to steal my wallet!' An angry-faced accuser stood, finger aimed at an older man behind him.

Edgar immediately intervened. 'Have we got a thief?' he demanded.

40

'No, I'm not a thief. I'm a little unsteady on my feet and I fell over.' The older man's chin wobbled as he spoke, and Jeswin saw his eyes blinking rapidly.

Surely he was innocent.

'Let me help,' Jeswin said. 'There is probably some mistake here, but you, sir, have had a bit of a shock and need reassuring about your possessions, so I am going to ask Leo over there to let you put your luggage in right now. Meanwhile, you, sir, mustn't keep standing in this uncomfortable way: I am going to carry your suitcase over there to Maria.'

45

As Jeswin returned from Maria's desk, he saw Edgar smiling in approval. 'Well handled, young man. You've given me some ideas for this report I've got to write.'

Re-read Text C, The new job, in the insert and then answer Question 3 on this question paper.

Question 3

You are Edgar. That night you write the report that your boss has asked for about the work the 'Meet and Greet' team do. In your report you should:

- explain what the role of meeting and greeting passengers involves at present
- evaluate potential problems for both 'Meet and Greet' staff and passengers
- suggest how the experiences of both passengers and 'Meet and Greet' staff could be improved.

Write the words of the report.

Base your report on what you have read in Text C, but be careful to use your own words. Address each of the three bullet points.

Write about 250 to 350 words.

Up to 15 marks are available for the content of your answer and up to 10 marks for the quality of your writing.
